This is the 7th year of our initiative and is sponsored by the Phi Lambda Chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc. The initiative was born out of the National Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity Program "Go To High School, Go To College" and the desire to acknowledge the academic successes of African American students. Each year the academic shortfalls of African American students becomes a major topic of conversation. The initiative was launched to shine a light on the young African American students that have worked hard in school and those that have made plans to matriculate to different college/universities. In the same vein of athletic scholarship signings days, the initiative will provide young men and women a day to announce to the world their plans for higher learning. The initiative works closely with schools, churches, and community organizations to identify individuals that will be attending college to participate.
